Thailand's Economic Indicators (June): A slowdown in economic activity from weak external and domestic demand

- Smaller decline in exports and a collapse in imports resulted in a current account surplus of US$3.9 bn in June from a deficit in May. Merchandise exports (BOP basis)¹ contracted by 2.1% YoY in June across the majority of goods (excluding gold exports, the drop is 9.1% YoY), while imports of goods plunged 9.6% YoY in line with domestic industrial production, so the trade balance posted a surplus of US$4.4bn for June.
- Tourist arrivals mildly rebounded by 0.9% YoY for the month (compared to a 1.0% YoY drop in May), primarily driven by the sharp increase in the number of Indian tourists, up by 27.1%. Nevertheless, Chinese tourist arrivals continued to contract by 7.1% YoY. Hence, the net services, income & transfers account posted a lesser deficit of US$ -0.5 bn compared to US$ -1.8 bn in May. Given such backdrop, the current account improved from a US$ -0.4bn deficit in May to a US$ 3.9bn surplus in June.
- Private consumption expanded at a slower pace. The Private Consumption Index (PCI) growth softened to 2.4% YoY this month compared to 3.7% in May, reflecting falling momentum in good purchases in almost all categories, especially the durables such as passenger cars and motorcycles (Chart 1). The decline was in tandem with a small non-farm income growth of 1.9% YoY. Farm income, on the other hand, rose by 6.7% YoY led by higher agricultural prices of rubber and pineapple.
- Production and investment indicators further contracted. The Manufacturing Production Index (MPI) posted the deepest drop of 5.5% YoY since April 2016 (Chart 2), driven down by export-oriented sectors, such as electronics. Also, the Private Investment Index (PII) fell by 4.6% YoY with declines across most categories. Public investment fell by a 5.3% YoY partly due to constraints from investment project revisions while the new government settles in.
- Given the weak readings for the economic indicators in 1H2019, we are more likely to downgrade the Thai 2019 GPD forecast of 3.1% upon the release of Q2 2019 GDP by the NEDSC. With the 6M19 export decline of 4.1% YoY, we see whole-year exports to contract by 1% from our previous assumption of 0.5% growth. Currently the BOT's GDP forecast of 3.3% looks increasingly optimistic therefore the BOT should lower its 2019 GDP and inflation forecasts too. Further, we expect to see a shift in monetary policy stance from the BOT soon as growth and inflation continue to disappoint.
